There is another attempt being made to get the electric light in working order again. There is no doubt it would be a great convenience, and a much better safeguard against the risk of fire. We hope there will be a sufficient number of lights guaranteed to make the undertaking worth the venture. It up all who live in town to do this.

When ladies wish to exhibit their equestrian abilities they would do well to understand the disposition of the steed they mount. A well-known lady had a mount lent her the other day, on which to try her skill, she had not proceeded very far, however, when some dogs, of which there are always a quantity running around the streets, saw a chance of some fun, commenced to bark at horse and rider. The horse took off and the rider became scared, and a la John Gilpin, the horse and rider went off down the street. The lady soon came to grief, she managed to get to the hotel without assistance, where she was laid up for a day or two. We are glad to hear she is getting over her injuries and will shortly be no worse for her adventure.

We have a number of clients

Dr. Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States, has sent a requisition throughout the States calling upon all Americans to observe Sunday next, Oct. 4th, as a day of prayer for peace. It is also being observed in Canada.

We wish to call the attention of the public to the fact that having discontinued the shipping of hogs during the hot weather, we have decided to again ship hogs and cattle, and we will pay the highest market

International Irrigation Congress.

Monday next the great International Irrigation Congress opens in Calgary and continues for five days. Everything is now in readiness, and the Congress from an educative and instructive point of view promises to be one of the most successful events of its kind ever held in Western Canada.

Apart from the Congress itself the exhibition in connection promises to be one of the most interesting features, and for this exhibition there have already been made over one hundred entries from districts, individuals, corporations and governments. These will make one of the finest collections of Canadian products ever seen in Western Canada.

An interesting and unique display will be that of the Dominion Government, which is now being placed in the exhibition building by J. Bruce Walker, Dominion Commissioner of Immigration at Winnipeg. Mr. Walker himself will be present at the Congress and deliver an address on "Nation Building in Western Canada." Another fine display will be that of the Canadian Pacific Railway. Up to date there are sufficient exhibits to occupy all the space assigned for the purpose. These being upwards of one hundred entries including 36 display exhibits.

The Congress will be held in the horse show building Victoria Park, and the public are cordially invited to attend all the sessions. Special single fare rates on certificate plan are given on Canadian railroads to the Congress, and a trip-free to delegates will be given by the Canadian Pacific Railway to the irrigation project at Bonanza on Friday the last day of the Congress.

The evening sessions of the Congress will be exceptionally bright, as besides the speakers there will be patriotic music by a choir of four or five hundred voices especially trained for the occasion by Max Weil, until recently leader of Calgary Symphony Orchestra.

The opening session on Monday morning will be more or less of a spectacular nature. There will be a parade of the officials of the Congress accompanied by martial music, followed by the unfurling of the flags and draperies at the convention hall by H. R. H. the Duke of Connaught, Governor-General of Canada. His Royal Highness will not be present in Calgary personally, but will in Ottawa

PUBLIC NOTICE.

A Sitting of the District Court will be held at CROSSFIELD, on FRIDAY, OCTOBER 9th, commencing at 10 a.m.

Deputy Attorney General.

press a button electrically connected with the batteries in the Congress Hall, and thus unfurl the flags.

The ceremony will be followed by speeches of welcome from officials of the Dominion, the Province, the City and the Congress. The following sessions will be taken up by addresses from prominent irrigation authorities of the United States and Canada, some of whom have spent the greater part of their lives in solving the problems which confront the man who is actually on the land.

The program contains the names of such prominent men as John Wilder, President Utah Agricultural College; J. T. Hinkle, Secretary of the Oregon Irrigation Congress; W. H. Fairfield, Superintendent of the Dominion Experimental Farm at Lethbridge; H. B. Walker, State Irrigation Engineer of Kansas; Hon. Duncan Marshall, Minister of Agriculture of Alberta; Dr. F. H. Newell, Director of the reclamation service of the United States; J. C. Noble, Chairman of the Board of Water Engineers, Texas; and many others of equal importance.

Many of the subjects will be of special interest to the western farmers. "Farm Development in the Arid West," is the title of an address by Kurt Grunwaldt, consulting engineer of Colorado; "Some Irrigation Problems of Texas," that of J. C. Nagle; H. B. Muckleton, of Calgary, will deal with the subject "Irrigation Enterprises of the Canadian Pacific Railway in Alberta"; J. Bruce Walker, Dominion Commissioner of Immigration, will have as his subject "Nation Building in Western Canada." The session will be equally as interesting to the dry farmer as to the irrigation farmer.

"It is very lucky she is not in a worse part," said Sunnington. "I am very sorry to have to inform you, Dean, that although I know perfectly well the reason of Barbara's disappearance, I cannot give it to you. It is a profound secret—no one must know it. The poor child went away when we would gladly have helped her, but thanks to you and the lady who wrote to you, we may be able to do something now."

"Well, if you can, I shall be very much obliged," said Dean Chance. "We have always been attached to my cousin Humphrey; he and I were at college at the same time, and although he would sink down into a country Rectory, and I become a Dean of the Church, yet, nevertheless, we have remained the same age. He married and had this sweet little daughter, and I am a lone man. I would gladly give Barbara a home."

"We will let her know that; it would be an excellent thing," said Dean Chance. "Well now, if you will leave us, Dean—we are both very busy—we will go as soon as possible to see Barbara at the address you gave us. What did you say it was? 12th, Vauxhall Bridge Road?"

"That is the address where my poor old friends, the Henslowes live. I assure you, they are most respectable people. They at one time owned a very large property, but have been reduced to a small, very small, income. However, they seem to be perfectly happy, and have lived in their quarters for ten years. The house, therefore, although the neighborhood may not be quite desirable, must at least be respectable."

"That is good hearing," said Paries. "Well, we will write to you, Dean Chance, and you have our very best thanks for coming and telling us this good news with regard to the child."

The Dean went away only half satisfied, but so, perhaps it would be wise. What was the mystery which had made the child run away and yet evidently confided in the lawyers, who knew something of the matter? What something? Something that Humphrey Chance had said to him, "Humphrey Chance—or his wife? The Dean remembered Mrs. Chance—a most charming and lovely woman, but far greater beauty than little Barbara, who inherited something of her father's pale complexion and dark hair, whereas, Mrs. Chance had hair bright as gold, large light blue eyes, and the sort of face that captivated every man she came across. The Dean himself used to love to visit at the Rectory when Mrs. Chance was alive, but at her death, he never came again. He recalled now the mystery which letter from his old friend had received a thought much of it at the time, but now it gave him a peculiar sensation. The letter ran as follows:

"My Dear Dean—I have sad news to tell you. My wife passed away at Naples, on the 10th of this month. I shall never see her again. I have no one to comfort me but my little child, who is now only two years old."

"My Dear Dean—I have sad news to tell you. My wife passed away at Naples, on the 10th of this month. I shall never see her again. I have no one to comfort me but my little child, who is now only two years old."

Eczema for Three Years. Broke Out on Head in Scales. Itched and Burned Badly. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured.

Lyons Brook, N. B.—"I suffered with eczema for three years. It started on my hands first in some between my fingers and all over the palms of my hands and fingers were bad cracks. Then it broke out on my head in scales. It itched and burned so badly I could not sleep. It was so itching and burning that I scratched and scratched and made more and more itchy and cut awfully bad. I did not know what to do."

"I was treated for a long time and it did not do any good. I gave up my work for a month but as soon as I started doing my housework again my hands got just as bad as ever. I used two bottles of — and it did not do any good. — I read about Cuticura Soap and Ointment and decided to try them. I got for a sample and I used them till I saw it stopped the itching and burning. I used for three cakes of Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment and it cured me completely." Mrs. P. McKewen, Feb. 27, 1913.

Not only are Cuticura Soap and Ointment most valuable in the treatment of skin and other distressing eruptions of skin and eczema, but no other ointment does so much for itchy, cracked, and rough skin, itching, scaly scales, dandruff, dry skin and falling hair, chapped lips, and cracked heels, nor do it so cheaply. Sold by druggists and dealers everywhere. For a full sized sample of Cuticura Soap, a box, send post-card to Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Dept. B, Boston, U. S. A.

W. N. U. 1018

I want to make a special request of you, Dean, and that is that you don't come any more to see me at the Rectory. I must tell you, I am not here for the sake of my child, but I have no heart for friends or relations, no him or her will be able to visit me, I send for you; I will let it wait you. At present, I am an absolutely broken-down man. Your old friend, Dean Chance, "Humphrey Chance."

Now, as the Dean thought over this letter, he could not help feeling that there was something strange about it. There were no particulars with regard to the sudden death of Mrs. Chance; she was a young and healthy woman in her prime—she could not have been more than six-and-thirty. She had died, according to her husband's letter, at Naples, and was buried there, and had left him alone with his only child. It is true, he had gone back to his parish, and had done his work regularly. His parishioners knew that his wife was dead—at least, that was the general idea—but he had died. The Dean doubted it. He said to himself now, after his fruitless visit to the

"What a fool I have been! I ought to have gone straight to Humphrey when I got this letter. I should have troubled out of him. I ought to have insisted upon his telling me about the death of his wife. Why should I wait like Clementina Chance did suddenly at Naples? There is something wrong. I have a good reason to enter into this secret. Why not? There are holiday times. Why shouldn't I go to Naples, and see her over there?"

What satisfied me. The lawyers are secretly determined to keep their secret to themselves. I have heard of Braham for nothing. I owe a great deal to my good friend, Dean Chance, and if I can befriend his child, I will, but I must be taken into her confidence. I have a good reason to enter into this secret. Why not? There are holiday times. Why shouldn't I go to Naples, and see her over there?"

And that is what I am going to do. I was much pleased to meet a dignified man, who was a native of my country. "Anything in my power that I can do for you, Dean Chance, I will

"Can you give me any particulars with regard to the death of a lady, who was very beautiful, and who was called Clementina Chance? She died, according to my information, about seventeen years ago, and was buried out where she is buried. I have a particular reason for wishing to

The English Chaplain took the Dean to his room, and they sat apart for some time. The Dean was sitting there, and who have a special part in the life of the young man. Can you give me any particulars with regard to the death of a lady, who was very beautiful, and who was called Clementina Chance? She died, according to my information, about seventeen years ago, and was buried out where she is buried. I have a particular reason for wishing to

"This looks very, very odd," thought the Dean. He said nothing, however.

"Are you certain the lady is dead? She certainly, if she had died, would have been buried here. The thing would be for me to give you the name of the gentleman who was Chaplain at the time you refer to. Can you tell me the exact date of her death?"

"I make it out to be some time about the 15th January, 1885."

"What you mean, I follow the very man who can help you."

"Do you?" How kind of you to take this trouble."

"Not at all. I am delighted to welcome you, Dean, and to help you in every way in my power. The gentleman who was then Chaplain in Force. He still lives in Naples, I can take you to his house."

"If you will do so, I shall be most grateful," said the Dean.

They both started, and presently found themselves in a small, neat, kept garden. They rang a bell, and were admitted into the presence of an old clergyman, with snow-white hair, who greeted Joyce with fervor, and who was much pleased when he was introduced to Dean Chance. "Chance?"

"Chance?" he said. "Your name is familiar. Oh! and the color rushed into his cheeks. "Oh, now I know!"

"What do you know, my dear sir?"

"I don't think I can tell you what I know."

"But this is intolerable," said the Dean. "I have come all the way from my dear old Egham to discover what my poor cousin's wife is dead. He wrote me a letter at the time, saying that she had died and was buried."

The face of Mr. Force had resumed its usual expression, and he did not speak at all for several minutes. Then he said gravely:

"Well, I am not at all positively sure to you, sir, in the presence of another."

"Oh, I am in the way," said Joyce. "To have only to say the word. Naturally, there must be secrets which you would only communicate to your relatives."

"You would be so very good as to leave me for a time with Mr. Force. I should be most grateful to you," said the Dean.

Joyce accordingly left the room and went into the garden to wait for his cousin. The Dean and Mr. Force were alone. Dean Chance said:

"I certainly got a letter at the time from your cousin, in which he told me of his wife's sudden death; he gave me no particulars, but simply told me she had died in the great city. I went to the cemetery, but could find no sign of her grave. He also, in his letter, made a strange request. I used to be good friends—like brothers, in fact, but in his letter he said that he must ask me not to come and see him any more for the present. He has now a wife and left one daughter. There is a mystery in connection with him or with his wife, and I must send for you; I will let it wait you. At present, I am an absolutely broken-down man. Your old friend, Dean Chance, "Humphrey Chance."

"I can," said Mr. Force.

"It would not be right for me to do so. I can only tell you one thing, the woman is dead. I don't doubt that I leave to your imagination. Do not question me further. It was a terrible death. I was out of the house. I don't know. I don't know."

"And you know she is alive? Alive? Little Barbara Chance's mother is alive?"

"She was alive a short time ago. I have no reason to believe that she is dead. But anyhow, that is all I can tell you now. I should not think of Dean Chance left Mr. Force, feeling very much as when he had shown him to liberty to reveal it to you."

"It does not matter to me, my dear sir, if you will let me know the evening. It will be a great pleasure to me to see you. I will be many times interested to talk about. You will surely tell me in the morning, being my guest for tonight, at least?"

"Yes, I will," said the Dean, "for to-night, as you say, I will stay. I am not yet beyond words. I do not know how to act or what to do."

"It does not matter to me, my dear sir, if you will let me know the evening. It will be a great pleasure to me to see you. I will be many times interested to talk about. You will surely tell me in the morning, being my guest for tonight, at least?"

WORLD'S MOST-TRAVELLED MAN

Rev. Francis E. Clark, Founder of the Christian Endeavor Society, Has

This Distinction

Doublets and triplets in the world has travelled so many miles and done so large a work for the world as Rev. Francis E. Clark, L.L.D., founder of the Christian Endeavor Society and president of the World's Christian Endeavor Union.

Thirty-three years ago Dr. Clark was pastor of the Williston Congregational Church of Portland, Maine. It was then a young man just fresh from college and seminary. Williston church was a typical New England church, with all of the problems and difficulties that these churches had to meet.

In the winter of 1880-1881 a series of special evangelistic services in the church had led a great many young people into church membership. This wise young pastor realized that if those young people were to be held for the church they must be trained for service; they must have something to do, and their lives must be lived for God. He called his young people together, and on February 2, 1881, the first Christian Endeavor society was formed, the first Christian Endeavor pledge was signed, and the following Sunday evening the first Christian Endeavor prayer meeting was held.

From that small beginning in Portland, the society grew rapidly, and grew, until today there are more than 80,000 Christian Endeavor societies in the world, with a membership of 600,000 members.

There are Christian Endeavor societies in every country of the world, and each week meetings are conducted in every city, village, and hamlet. The literature of the society has been printed in as many tongues as there are cities, villages, and hamlets. Monthly periodicals carry Christian Endeavor news; more than 200 papers and magazines are published for the use of the work of the society and as aids to it. Millions of pages of special literature are issued every year.

From almost the very beginning of the movement Christian Endeavor has been interdenominational in its scope and has been a factor in the development of the Christian church today there are 87 denominations that take Christian Endeavor as their official work.

Throughout the world there are probably more Methodist Christian Endeavor churches than in any other denomination, though in North America many of the Methodist churches have purely their own young people's society. On this continent there are more societies in the Methodist denomination than in any other denomination; the Christian church has the second largest number of societies in the world, the Baptist fourth, the Episcopal fifth, the Lutheran sixth, the Presbyterian seventh, the Methodist eighth, the United Brethren ninth, the Baptist tenth, the Episcopal eleventh, the Lutheran twelfth, the Increasing Live Stock Production.

The outbreak of the war in Europe and the consequent demand which is naturally to be expected for increased exports of meats, finds Canada in a very much denuded condition as regards live stock.

As a result of the removal of the American tariff on cattle a heavy export trade developed to the south. In some districts in eastern Canada, nearly everything has been shipped out of the country, except dairy cows. This export trade, together with many farmers selling their calves for veal, can have but one result in Canada, viz: a greater scarcity of meat than at present exists, even in a normal market.

The meat industry in Canada should not be allowed to dwindle—rather, the production of hogs, sheep and cattle on Canadian farms should be greatly increased. To obtain this increase does not mean that farmers should devote their whole attention to live stock. The majority of farmers will admit that with very little extra effort and expense they could increase by several head the livestock on their farms without in any way interfering with their present system of farming.

From reports to the Commission of Conservation, present conditions indicate a world-wide scarcity of live stock, with little likelihood of an overcrowded market for many years to come. The opportunity for Canadian farmers is therefore apparent. To take advantage of this, farmers should save their heifer calves to produce more cattle, while the others may be turned off, not as veal but as beef.

Expert stockmen advise that there are good times ahead for those raising sheep. The high price of mutton and of wool, and the comparative ease with which a flock of sheep may be sustained upon land which is otherwise unsuitable for agriculture, should suggest a great increase in the number of sheep raised by Canadian farmers.

Increased production in hogs can be brought about more quickly than in any other class of live stock, and consequently should receive immediate attention.

Animal production on the farm is defensible because it increases the fertility and crop-raising ability of the soil. Good prices are sure to be obtained for any surplus which farmers will have to sell on account of the inevitable shortage of supply resulting from war conditions in Europe. These two conditions should be an incentive to Canadian farmers to increase their live stock production. A little foresight now, with modern methods of feeding, will make increased production easily possible.
